"The Stone Soup"

One day a beggar comes to an old woman's house. He says:

"Please, I need some food"

But the woman says:

"Go away! I haven't got any food!"

Then the beggar says:

"But I've got a magic stone. I can make soup with it. I only need some water"

Then the woman says:

"A magic stone, eh? Well, then, come in. I've got some water."

She puts a saucepan with water on the cooker and the beggar puts the stone in the water. Then he tastes the soup.

"Mmmm! It's very tasty. But it just needs some salt and pepper"

The woman says:

"I've got some salt and pepper"

She adds some salt and pepper to the soup.

The beggar tastes the soup.

"Mmmm! It's very tasty! It just needs some vegetables"

The woman says:

"I've got some vegetables"

She runs into the garden and comes back with some tomatoes, some potatoes, some carrots and some parsley in her hands. She adds them to the soup.

The beggar tastes the soup.

"Mmmm! It's very tasty. It just needs some meat"

The woman says:

"I've got some meat"

She brings some meat and sausages and adds them to the soup.

The beggar tastes the soup.

"Right! I can't see the stone now. The soup is ready. Let's eat. But bread is very good with stone soup"

The woman says:

"I've got some bread"

She brings some bread and two dishes. She puts them on the table. The beggar pours the soup in the dishes. The woman tastes the soup.

"Mmmm! It's very tasty! And there's only a stone in it!"

The beggar eats the soup. When he goes away, he gives the woman the magic stone.

"You can have the magic stone now" he says.

"Oh, thank you" she says.

"But, remember" says the beggar.

"For the best stone soup, you need some salt, some pepper, some potatoes, some tomatoes, some carrots, some parsley, some meat and some sausages"

Tick the things that the old woman put in the saucepan. Then make sentences and read them out in class:

- Meat
